I remember watching The English Patient for the first time. I remember slouching down into a third row seat of a theater in Union Square and not moving for the entire 155 minutes. The image of an injured Katherine Clifton (Kristin Scott Thomas) being carried through the Sahara Desert by Count Almásy (Ralph Fiennes) in her long white tunic against that burnt orange horizon is forever imprinted. The story unfolds through a series of flashbacks and hand written notes that spill out of the Count's journal against a backdrop of the 1930s and early 40s.

The dry, raw, authenticity of the desert has long inspired me. Whether it is Joshua Tree or Tanzania, there is a certain feeling of time standing still when you are in the desert. A forever calming quality that lends itself to realness. This season the new La LOOP Collection comes straight out of Anthony Minghella's film. Lots of gold, lots of shine yet lots of earthiness too. The Tibeian Amber Dog Tag, The Clifton and the Modern St Tropez in Sterling Silver possess this forever authentic quality. An understated elegance. That is La LOOP.
